Success Story Spotlight

Tom Newton

When Tom became Iowa's director of public health in May 2007, one of his biggest priorities was to decrease the number of overweight and obese people in the state. And that included himself.

How he lost weight

- Started walking, then running
- Cut back on fast food meals
- Ate more fruits and vegetables

Tips from Tom

Take small steps. "At first, my only activities were taking the stairs and walking," Tom says. "The more I walked, the further I could go. Then I added running to my walks, and soon it was all running." Tom has now completed two half-marathons.

Sneak in activity. Tom is so busy that he often doesn't have time to get a full half hour of exercise. So he goes up and down the stairs at work for 10 minutes.

Be fearless. "I was apprehensive about going running when I was in poor shape," Tom says. "I thought people would stare at me and comment about how out of shape I was. But then I thought, 'Who cares? Just get out there anyway.'"
